The Farmer's Seventy Years.

Ah, there he is, lad, at the plow; He beats the boys for work, And whatsoe'er the task might be None ever saw him shirk. And he can laugh, too, till his eyes Run o'er with mirthful tears, And sing full many an old-time song In spite of seventy years.

"Good morning, friends! 'tis twelve o'clock Time for a half hour's rest." And farmer John took out his lunch And ate it with a zest. "A harder task, it is," he said, "Than following up these steers,

To feel my seventy years. "You ask me why I feel so young, I'm sure, friends, I can't tell. But think it is my good wife's fault

Or mending fences, far, for me

Who's kept me up so well; For women such as she are scarce In this poor vale of tears; She's given me love and hope and strength For more than forty years.

"And then my boys have all done well, As far as they have gone. And that thing warms an old man's blood, And helps him on and on. My girls have never caused a pang, Or raised up anxious fears. Then wonder not that I feel young

"Why don't my good boys do my work, And let me sit and rest? Ah! friends, that wouldn't do for me; I like my own way best.

And hale at seventy years.

They have their duty; I have mine, And, till the end appears, I mean to smell the soil, my friends," Said the man of seventy years.

A RASH ENGAGEMENT:

How a Male Trifler Was Scrved.

"Now, Gerard, I shall count on you!" "My dear aunt," said Gerard Fay, taking her hand and looking in her sparkling face with intense gravity, "do nothing of the sort. I protest against it. You inveigled me to your count v seat with perfumed billets and honeyed flatteries. I yield; for who but a madman could struggle against destiny in such a shape? But encroach no further I consent to be ornamental—to adorp your saloons- to occupy the fourth seat in your barouche—to accompany you to church and stare down the loungeraround the door, but I utterly and entirely refuse to be useful. I will not fan plethorie dowagers; I will not waltz with boarding-school misses, nor sing duets, nor bring shawls, nor clasp brace lets, nor-by Jove! who's that?"

daughter. | Shall I introduce you?" "By no means! It's a lovely, highhred face, though — clearly cut as a cameo, and those soft, unfathomable eyes! Do you remember Dominie Cheno's Sybil?"

"Welcome to Maplewood," said a gay voice behind him.

Gerard started and bit his lips.

"Why did you not tell me Kate Irwin was here!" he said, in a vexed undertone to his aunt; but Mrs. L'Aymar had glided away, and Gerard had noth. ing for it but to seat himself resignedly by the lady-a dashing brunette, becomingly arrayed in a muslin dress and garden hat, who was watching Mr. Fay with a somewhat amused smile.

"Again I say, welcome to Maplewood," she repeated. "It was vastly kind of Mrs. L'Aymar to send for you. The country is such a bore, and perhaps you can amuse me; you did not use to be quite so stupid as the rest in town."

"Cool, that!" thought Gerard. Then aloud: "I should be most happy to be amusing to Miss Irwin had I not entered a solemn protest against anything of the sort. I came here to be entertained. So, to commence, who's here?"

"Why do you ask, since the villa is the inevitable rechauffee of the town house. Mrs. Poplin is here with Desdemons, Araminta and Amanda. You should see how they take to innocence, white muslin and new-laid eggs. Desdemona, who was a young lady when I was in short clothes, sits on a low stool and wears beby waists, and Amanda has got a kitten and puts up her hair in curl papers regularly. Then there's exact he is!" Ads Golbeck, the blue; and Cobham, who waltzes so divinely; and that fascinating little Mrs. Temple Stowe; and Captain Gresham, whom everybody is crazy about, and your humble servant. That's all, I believe."

Gerard, pointing to Miss Parker, who too far, "and I shall try to person still sat at the window.

"I really don't kn

duty to propitiate. There's the dressing-bell!

"Thank heaven!" ejaculated Gerard, aloud, as Miss Irwin swept from the room. "Now that the womankind are safe at least an hour, I may get a nap. What a bore this gallantry is, to be sure! Why couldn't I have said to that consummate coquette: 'I'm confoundedly sleepy! If you'll permit me, I'll go and dream of your eyes." All the while he was leisurely extending himself on a light settee that he had drawn up before one of the deep bow windows. every now and then making a sally at an impertinent mosquito, who hummed and buzzed in his ear with irritating persistency.

Through the waving curtains he could dimly see the level, sloping lawn, the trees motionless in the noon heat, the cows standing in the pond beneath their shade, the low splash of the water; the shrill song of the grasshoppers grew fainter and fainter on his ear, his eyes closed-"buz," "hum"-there was that mosquito again!

"Confound the rascal!" he exclaimed, jumping up in a rage, "if he hasn't bitten my nose! He is a greater torment than a woman, and that's-"

He stopped short in dismay, for from the recess of the window issued a peal of clear ringing laughter, and before him stood the young lady who had already attracted his notice.

"Don't be alarmed, sir," she said, still laughing. "It is only the last of the 'womankind,' whom you accidentally made a prisoner, and who promised not to betray all the treason you have uttered against her sex, if you will permit her to retire."

"Not till I have convinced you that in no way could my remarks apply to vou," answered Gerard, "since I was not talking of the angels."

"Spare your compliments," returned Nelly, with a curling lip, "or reserve them for Miss Irwin or the Misses Poplin. I am a simple country girl, incapable of appreciating them."

"Ah! I see you are revengeful."

"On the contrary, I forgive you."

"Proof is-" "How?"

"By permitting me to act as your escort to dinner."

Nelly seemed in danger of another fit of laughter. She, who could have set the table, cooked the dinner and eaten a good share of it afterward, escorted to the table like one of those languishing city ladies, who screamed at the sight of a cow, and didn't know corn from asparagus, except when it was cooked! What would father, and mother, and Bob say to that? Controlling her mirth as well as she was able, she signified her assent; and when Miss Irwin sailed into the diningroom it was to find the elegant, fastidious Gerard playing assiduous court to the little country girl, who received it as a matter of course. Still, that was not the least provoking part of the Poor Cobham, whose evil genius had decreed that on that day he should act as cavalier servante to the angry belle, Kate's angry glances chilled his very marrow, and scared all the small talk out of him.

Mrs. L'Aymar looked on in silent consternation.

Miss Irwin was not only a belle, but eligible to the extent of $100,000; and who knows what schemes had been running in the little lady's politic head when she invited Kate to spend the summer with her.

"At any rate," as she observed to her husband afterward, "I couldn't sit there, you know, and see Gerard making himself ridiculous, and the Poplins and Mrs. Temple Stowe looking onwho, of course, would tell of it all over

So, after a side glance at the bronze timepiece, Mrs. L'Aymar said, in her softest tones:

"My dear little Nelly, I am sorry to lose you, but I promised your father that you should return the moment the clock struck 'three,' and you know how Nellie flushed to her very temples, for she had been invited to spend the day, and well understood the reason of the sudden changes in Mrs. L'Ay-

"John shall drive you home," said "Who is that young lady?" saked | the lady, fearing, perhaps, she had gone of Miss Irwin; "but she looks in Gerard, with scornful emphasis; Gerard said nothing—being absorbed and do all the granter of some country magnate to harness his horses, for mine, if my dowdy, and budly dressed? Was that The average of the judgment of Frank Rashleigh, who thirty-three years.

the door, and I shall be only too happy to drive Miss Parker home."

And he did take her home, spite of the ill-concealed wrath of Mrs. L'Aymar and the fascinating Miss Irwin; and when he reached the old farmhouse, invited himself to go in (Nellie would never have had the courage), and claimed acquaintance with her father on the strength of a boxed ear once received from the dominie when a boy and at home during the vacation, and complimented brother Bob on his farming and Mrs. Parker on her housewifery, and stayed to tea, and talked. politics and theology, and everything but love, for which he contented himself with looking at Miss Nellie.

Day after day saw his stylish turnout dashing down the green, shady lane that led to the dominie's; and it was a standing joke of his groom that "Mas'r was going for the consolations of religion." The very dogs round the place came to know him, while no damask rose ever glowed as did Nellie's cheek when she heard the music of his horses' hoofs galloping on the road.

Mrs. L'Aymr's indignation knew no

"The way Gerard goes on with that girl is ridiculous," she said to Kate Irwin, "and I consider it my duty to interfere."

"Then he will assuredly marry her," responded the lady, coolly. "Can you not see he is only amusing himself? Oppose him and he is capable of any folly. Leave him alone and he will soon tire of his new-found toy."

Reasoning on widely different principles, Mrs. Parker had arrived at the same conclusion, and sadly and anxiously she watched the gradual change in Nelly's demeanor.

"Old Martha tells me you never visit her lately," she said to her daughter one afternoon.

A bright flush crimsoned Nell "So she has been complaining, has she? Tiresome old woman!" "And Miss Goodwin has mentioned to me." continued her mother, without appearing to notice Nelly's tone, "that you are seldom or never at the Thursday prayer-meetings." "I don't believe," returned Nelly, that we ought to be always singing and praying and visiting old women. I am young, and I want to enjoy life." "Who gave you life?" answered Mrs. Parker, "and how long is it since you found it wearisome to praise and serve God? Ah! Nelly, Nelly, since Mr.

Fay-" "There it is again," interrupted Nelly; "always Mr. Fay! Everything is his fault. What has he done, I should like to know, that you all hate him so?" "Hate him! Ah! Nelly, how blind you are! You love that man!"

"Well, I do," retorted Nelly, "did you never love? Am I the first one in the family who has been in love?"

"Nelly, has Mr. Fay ever asked you to marry him?"

Nelly was silent.

"Has he ever even told you that he loved you?"

"I don't care if he hasn't," answered Nelly, sobbing. "I know he does, and I don't see why you want to make me so miserable; and I wish I was dead-I

At this interesting juncture arrived Mr. Gerard Fay. Mrs. Parker, not feeling desirous to meet him, vanished through a side door, and Nellie, unable to regain her composure, or dissimulate without intending to do so, allowed Gerard to guess the secret of her distress; and he, feeling unusually magnanimous after an extra bottle of champagne, and moved by the sight of beauty in tears, forthwith offered himself, and was accepted.

"There, I told you so," said Mrs. L'Aymar, furiously, to Kate.

"Keep cool," was the rejoinder, "and let us go and call on the bride-elect. Frank Rashleigh will be down next week, and then we shall see what we

And Mrs. L'Aymar, having no small confidence in her cool-headed friend. waited patiently until Mr. Rashleigh, Gerard's intimate friend, should arrive. When that important personage made his appearance, it is to be presumed that the ladies enlisted him at onceshortly after his arrival he took occasion to remark to Gerard:

"That's rather a pretty girl (pointing to Nelly). Pity she's such a dowdy figure, and dresses in such a Sandwich was a well-known connoisseur in female beauty—on his pearl—his lily of maidens, as he had fondly termed her? Was he indeed so blind?

Rashleigh saw the shot had taken effect, and wisely forbore further comments at that time. He then turned his attention to Miss Irwin, whom he pronounced "a perfectly elegant woman, and faultlessly beautiful."

"Maybe so," dryly answered Gerard, but I prefer the half-opened rosebud to the tulip."

Spite of which, ere long, he virtually transferred himself and his attentions to Miss Irwin, who concealed her delight under an affectation of cold dig-

Sometimes Nelly's paling cheeks after an unusually protracted absence smote him with a keen sense of selfreproach—"but she ought to have un-'Reason should have shown her our entire incompatibility."

Singularly enough reason had entirely failed to perform her duty in the first stage of Nelly's love; but she had stepped in now, and suggested that a man who had behaved like Gerard Fay must be alike devoid of principle, character or common good feeling, and could not, therefore, be considered a very serious loss by any sensible girl.

Whereupon Nelly took heart, grew prettier and more blooming than ever. One day as she was walking leisurely along the little path that wound through the beautiful woods from whence the village derived its name, she suddenly found herself face to face with Gerard

Her first impulse was to turn back. Her second, to bow stiffly. Her third, to speak in the most cordial manner imaginable, which she accordingly did.

Gerard's salutation was by no means so unembarrassed, but instead of passing on, as he might have easily done he continued to walk by her side, discoursing of the weather, the scenery, the last new novel, and growing more and more desperate at Nelly's unmistakable indifference-till, at last, he frankly told Nelly the story of his short comings with regard to her, taking care to color it slightly, and practicing a little arithmetic on it, in the way of adfor better or worse.

Whereupon Nelly, who listened to the whole with a perfect immobile countenance, quietly asked: "Have you finished, Mr. Fay?"

"Yes," replied the gentleman, somewhat doubtfully.

"Very well, sir. I have only to say -could not marry a man I did not respect, and could not respect the man who had not the principle to refrain from entering into rash engagements, the honor to keep them, the sense to refrain from the attempt to patch them up when broken. Good-morning, Mr. Fay."

And so ended Gerard's campaining for 1880.

Filial Love.

There is not on earth a more lovely sight than the unwearied care and attention of children to their parents. Where filial love is found in the heart we will answer for all the other virtues. No young man or woman will turn out basely, we sincerely believe, who has parents respected and beloved. child, affectionate and dutiful, will never bring the gray hairs of its parents to the grave. The wretch who breaks forth from wholesome restraint, and disregards the laws of his country, must have first disobeyed his parents, showing neither love nor respect for them It is seldom the case that a dutiful son is found in the ranks of vice among the wretched and degraded. Filial love will keep men from sin and crime. There never will come a time while your parents live when you will not be under obligations to them. The older they grow the more need will there be for your assiduous care and attention to their wants. The venerable brow and frosty hair speak loudly to the love and compession of the child. If sickness and infirmity make them at times fretful, bear with them patiently, not for tting that time ere long may bring you to need the same attention. Filial love will never go unrewarded. - Ame-

The Prevention of Sunstroke. The following hints for the prevention of sunstroke are given by Dr.

Edwin C. Mann, of New York city, in an article upon this subject in one cf the medical journals: To avoid sunstroke, exercise, in excessively hot weather should be very moderate; the clothing should be thin and loose, and an abundance of cold water should be drank. Workmen and soldiers should understand that as soon as they cease to perspire, while working or marching in the hot sun, they are in danger of sunstroke, and they should immediately drink water freely and copiously to afford matter for cutaneous transpiration, and also keep the skin and clothing wet with water. Impending sunstroke may often be warded off by these simple measures. - Besides the cessation of perspiration, the pupils are apt to be contracted, and there is a frequency of micturition. If there is marked exhaustion, with a weak pulse, resulting from the cold water application, we should administer stimulants. The free use of water, however, both externally and internally, by those exposed to the direct rays of the sun, is the best prophylactic against sunstroke, and laborers or soldiers, and others sho adopt this measure, washing their hands and taces, as well as drinking copiously of water every time they come reach of it, will ge traw hate should be worn, ve The little ones will keep on saying at the top, and the crown of the hathings. THE NATION'S SORROW.

Last Saturday morning President James A. Garfield was assassinated in Washington. Soon the terrible news was flashed over the world. Those who witnessed its reception in the cities will not soon forget the looks of men who gathered around the bulletin boards of the great dailies and marked the trembling lip and moist eye when the words "Dead," were written. It was a sign that President Garfield enjoys the love of many,—the respect and honor of all, and that something of the sorrow of the President's home was theirs also.

There is now every prospect that a a good conscience, a temperate life and a robust constitution will triumph over the assassin's bullet, and that he is to be spared to complete the term of office for which he and his cabinet have hoped so much. But if it should be otherwise (and it should not be forgotten that danger is by no means passed) let us remember that the existence or highest prosperity of the nation does not depend upon the life of any man.

A wise Providence decrees that great sorrows may prove unmistakable blessings. They are the tests of truest manbood and womanhood; they bring to the surface that which is holiest and best in the heart; they bury out of sight all that is trivial and mean,—those walls of partition that hinder any from recognizing the universal brotherhood of man. As with the individual, so is it with nations. The American people, in their weary watch over the life of President Garfield, are learning a great lesson, and its softened heart will have eraced from it, let us devoutly hope, in the tears which freely flow as a sign of its sorrow, much of the bitterness, selfishness and untruth which has made the last few months dark with apprehension for the future peace in parties or quiet in the nation.

"The unbounded licentiousness that characterizes our party competitions and political dissensions, the assassination of private character, and the unscrupulous methods resorted to to infuence the public judgment," in the language of ex-Gov. Tilden, are mainly guilty of this crime, though it be the deed of a wicked mad man; and as we stand with bated breath awaiting the issue, and see how truly all alike share in the sorrow, regardless of party, section or nationality, may not the "touch of nature" make us all brothers indeed, who shall, in the future, judge more kindly and therefore more justly,—lead us to discuss more calmly, and therefore more successfully,-those great national questions or those not unimportant party matters upon which men may strongly differ and yet be alike patriotic, true and high minded.

It certainly is a hopeful sign when the Boston Journal inserts a paragraph in its editorial columns which reads like

"We invoke the public conscience gainst these villainous assassins of character and their dastardly suggestions. As a nation, we are striken, and anxious, and heavy hearted as we have been no time since the murder of Lincoln. But there is nothing to justi- tered for the boat race, but only two fy a paralysis of the national reason or the national conscience. Let us be fair and decent and honorable in our judgment even of men whom we may with unsparing rebuke the slanders of ensation mongers. The nation is troubled and anxious; let it not forget to be just."

In response to a respectful appeal, and quite badly with paper caps, on the 4th. through the influence of a crafty suggestion that the noble class of '81 was composed of an immortal nine, who must be the direct representation of the nine muses, your prophet was treated to a panoramic view, representing each individual member in the early part of the twentieth century. The bell tinkled and the showman began to turn the crank. Immediately was heard the cheery sound of children's voices reciting in concert a peice beginning, "What do you think of her?" and forthwith dawned upon our delighted vision a large and orderly kindergarten, with Miss Collins enthroned as instructor. It was the picture of happiness and industry. Never was the " patter of the shingle" heard in these quiet domains. Regretfully we saw it glide from our sight, leaving in our minds that tranquility which dislikes to be disturbed by any thing irreverent. But, alas for our feelings, the mysterious showman, very improperly, said something about "sawbones."

Salt Lake City being an important railroad center, said our informant, to whom the future is a familiar tale, assumed immense propertions, and became noted for its school system, which almost equaled that of Boston. The originator of this system was the superintendent of schools, a lady of superior attainments, who once bore the name of Wood. Her essay on the education of women and convinced the inhabitants of Salt Lake that she was the man-no, I mean woman-for them. Her refinement, attractiveness, and social disposition had wen for her the highest position in society. She became a resident of the city, and held the position of superintendent for many years and left the schools in a condition corresponding to her ideas of what they should be. Our eyes fell upon her statue, adorning a public square in that distant city.

Miss Proctor, Miss Frost, and Miss Thing became well known by means of the talents which they showed in their school days, respectivelyart in adorning music books and albums, and music that hath charms to sooth the savage breast-of man. Perhaps you quote;-"Heaven, from all creatures,

-According to announcement the Boston Daily Advertiser appeared last Monday in an entire new make-up and dress, presenting a very creditable appearance. Hereafter it will appear in quarto form, the number of pages varying as the exigencies of the times may demand. Monday's number was a sheet of twelve pages well filled with telegraphic, local and miscellaneous matter, and advertisements. We heartily congratulate the publishers of this old New England staniard upon its improved appearance, and its evident prosperity.

-Saturday evening, Samuel White, walking down the Avenue, thought to begin his celebration of the 4th by firing a blasting cap. He inserted a piece of fuse, and while still holding the cap beween thumb and finger it exploded, tearing and lacerating his hand fearfully, so that he will loose two joints from the middle finger, one from the thumb, and possibly a joint from the fore finger. The burns and cuts elsewhere on the hand make very painful wounds. The cap is a little copper tube, about one inch long and one-eight inch in diameter, with not much more than a drop of explosive matter at the bottom.

Lexington Field and Garden Club.

The Club will take a drive on Monday, July 11th, to Malden, to visit the studio of Mr. A. F. Bicknell, to see his painting of the "Battle of Lexington," which is thought desirable to be owned by the town of Lexington, starting at 2 o'clock, P. M. Returning, the drive will be continued to the Cascade in the 'Middlesex Fells," and around Spot Pond. Conveyances will be furnished to all who send their names to Miss K. There is a deep interest manifested among our citizens concerning Mr. Bicknell's great painting of "The Battle of Lexington," and it is among the possibilities that this picture may yet belong to the town, as efforts in this direction are now being made. Several thousand dollars have already been subscribed by patriotic gentlemen in Boston and vicinity who desire that the picture may go to the spot where was fired "the shot heard around the world."

NEWS EPITOME.

East and Middle.

A good view of the newly-discovered comet was obtained in New York the other day, and from various other parts of the country come reports concerning the brilliant appearance of the long-tailed visitor to the heavens. There is quite a dispute as to who first saw the comet, several astronomers claiming that honor.

THE remains of Mrs. Henry Hatterman, of New York city, who died recently of consumption, were cremated in Lemoyne furnace, at Washington, Pa.

SILAS C. HERRING, a well-known inventor and safe manufacturer, died a few days ago at his home in Plainfield, N. J., aged seventy-

HENRY STANBERY, attorney-general of the United States during a part of President Johnson's administration, died a few days ago in New York, aged seventy years.

PRESIDENT GARFIELD and General Grant met the other day in Long Branch at an informal reception held by the former.

WALTER FINE, thirty years of age, while walking in Philadelphia with a young lady, was shot and instantly killed by George Hiller, twenty-seven years old. Jealousy was the cause of the crime.

HUNDREDS of passengers are leaving daily on the ocean steamers from New York for Europe-THE Columbia college eight-oar crew was defeated by the Harvard college crew in the four-mile race at New London, Conn.

SPEAKING of the new comet the New York papers say: Estimates of the length of the tail vary greatly according to the situation of the observer. In the city, where the eye is confused with the glare of many lights, and the air is dimmed by smoke, few persons can see the tail to a greater distance than ten or fifteen degrees from the head. At some of the observatories situated in the country, however, the tail is reported to be visible to a distance of forty degrees, which would give an actual length of some 20,000,000 miles. The comet's apparent speed is diminishing. It is yet approaching the north star, but much more slowly than at first, and it will remain visible for some weeks yet. Professor Boss, of the Dudley observatory, Albany, reports that on Sunday night he could see two branches of the tail, one perfectly straight and some forty degrees long, and the other shorter, fainter, and curved westward. Mr. Parkhurst relates that he has detected a bright dot or condensation near the nucleus, which suggests the probability that this comet may be about to split in two, as did Biela's comet many years ago. Dr. Peters, the veteran asteroid hunter, says he can see the shadow of the nucleus projected like a dark beam into the tail. Professor Draper is pashing his photographic work. Professor Young is flying the spectroscope, and other astronomers all over the United States and Europe are as busy as bees trying to solve the question that for hundreds of years has been their toughest riddle-what are comets made of? The identity of the comet has not yet been determined, but the weight of opinion seems to be that it is neither the comet of 1807 nor that of 1812. There seems, however, to be no longer v doubt that it is the same comet that Dr Gould saw in South America a month ago.

JOHN GYUMBER, the sleeping Hungarian at the Allentown (Pa.) poorhouse, spoke several times the other night, after a silence of 135 days. He said he belonged to the Sclavonic race and could speak Hungarian. His mind was still wandering, but his condition was slowly improving.

THE number of business failures for the first six months of this year, as announced by the New York Mercantile agency of Messrs. Dun, Wiman & Co., is 2,862. The number for the first half of 1880 was 2,497, and for the same period in 1879 4.018. The liabilities of these 2.862 were $40,000,000, as against $33,000,000 for the first six months of 1880, and $65,000,000 for the first half-year of 1879. The agency's semi-annual circular contains reports from forty-four trade centers, nearly all of which indicate a highly prosperous condition of business, and also reports which are uniformly favorable as to the condition of the crops, not only of grain, but also of rice, sugar, cotton, tobacco, etc. While the business outlook appears to be extremely favorable, the circular says, there exists a necessity for caution, even in these prosperous times.

A MAN in Philadelphia was arraigned under the act of 1721 for selling fireworks, and was in accordance with that law, fined five shillings The defendant had to buy five shillings from a broker, as the magistrate insisted on being paid in the coin named in the law.

WILLIAM G. WHITNEY, the son of Myra Clark Gaines by her first husband, was shot and killed at 5 o'clock in the afternoon by John Y. Christmas, Mrs. Gaines' son-in-law. The murder occurred in the house formerly occupied by Catacazy, the Russian minister, where Mrs. Gaines is now living, as were also the two men. Whitney and Christmas were partners in business some years ago, and there had been bad blood between them for a long time. The real cause of the trouble is said to have been mutual jealousy touching their prospective interests in Mrs. Gaines' large property.

A SAN FRANCISCO dispatch says that the steamer Newbern brought in the crew of the schooner Eustace and particulars of the killing of her captain and the firing of the vessel by a maniac cook. The cook, who had shown signs of dementia, suddenly stabbed the captain as he entered the cabin. He then ran into a closet where axes were kept. The crew closed the cabin doors. The cook continued walking about the cabin for several hours and threatened to fire the vessel. The crew got out the boats and soon after some smoke began rising from the cabin and the crew left hastily, as the vessel had 2,300 kegs of powder on board. Soon afterward she blew up, the maniac perishing in the explosion. The crew reached Mazatlan after a pull of sixty miles in a heavy sea.

PARTICULARS received of the railroad disaster on the Morelos railroad, in Mexico, show that it was most appalling. The disaster occurred at 11 o'clock at night, as the train-which was a long one and drawn by two engines-was passing over the wooden bridge. For a moment after the plunge of the cars from the bridge all was darkness. Suddenly 100 barrels of brandy. loaded on two of the vans, caught fire, and the burning fluid inundated the mass of passengers struggling in the ruins. Only a few, who were not disabled or hopelessly wedged in the tim. bers, escaped. The dead and living were wrapt in a sheet of flame and slowly burned before the eyes of the survivors, who were unable to save them. The latest accounts of the disaster report that seventeen officers and 197 privates were killed. This list does not include the railroad officials and employes, or the women and children of the soldiers, many of whom were on the train. Only sixty persons in all were saved alive, and forty of those were more or less injured.

Well Worth Reading.
Who is there that does not desire to be always exempted from indigestion—to have a good appetite, a painless stomach, a clear head. a regular pulse, a healthy complexion? If this meets the eye of any who are not thus blessed let them try Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. We guarantee that this delightful tonic will restore any stomach, however weak, to a healthy condition; that it will bring back the truant app tite, and give permanent vigor to the whole system. The feeble and emaciated, suffering from dyspepsia or indigestion in any form, are advised, for the sake of their own bodily and mental comfort, to try it. Ladies of the most delicate constitution testify to its harmless and its restorative properties. Physicians everywhere, disgusted with the adulterated liquors of commerce, prescribe it as the safest and most reliable of all stomachies.

A strange astronomical phenomenon is seen in the fact that when the irate father takes down his trunk strap there are liable to be spots on the son.

Indigestion.
The main cause of nervousness is indigestion, and that is caused by weakness of the stomach. No one can have sound nerves and good health without using Hop Bitters to strengthen the stomach, purify the blood, and keep the liver and kidneys active, to carry off the poisonous and waste matter of the system. RESCUED FROM DEATH.

William J. Coughlin, of Somerville, Mass., says: In the fall of 1876 I was taken with bleeding of the lungs, followed by a severe cough. I lost my appetite and flesh, and was confined to my bed. In 1877 I was admitted to the hospital. The doctors said I had a hole in my lung as big as a half-dollar. At one time a report went around that I was dead. I gave up hope, but a friend told me of Dr. William Hall's Balsam FOR THE LUNGS. I got a bottle, when, to my surprise I commenced to feel better, and to-day I feel better than for three years past. I write this hoping every one afflicted with diseased lungs will take Dr. Will-LIAM HALL'S BALSAM, and be convinced that CON-SUMPTION CAN BE CURED. I can positively say it has done more good than all the other medicines I have and Invigorates the whole System.

ITS MEDICINAL PROPERTIES ARE Alterative, Tonic, Solvent and Diuretic.

Reliable Evidence. Ma. H. R. Spreyers:

Dear Sir-I will most cheerfully add my testimony to the great number you have already received in favor of your great and good medicine, Vegetine, for I do not think enough can be said in its praise; for I was troubled over 30 years with that dreadful disease, Catarrh, and had such bad coughing spells that it would seem as though I never could breathe any more, and Vegetine has cured me; and I do feel to thank God all the time that there is so good a medicine as Vegetine, and I also think it one of the best medicines for coughs and weak, sinking feelings at the stomach, and advise everybody to take the Vegetine, for I can assure them it is one of the best medicines that ever was,

A NEW DEPARTURE

Weekly Springfield Republican

Since its foundation, nearly 60 years ago, The Springfield Republican has always contributed generously to the instruction and entertainment of its large rural constituency. To make the paper still more valuable as a guide and assistant fo farmers and their families, a first-class agricultural department has been lately added to the weekly edition. It regularly fills from four to five columns of space, and contains a variety of interesting matter, mainly original articles by skilled agriculturists, relating to life on the farm. Among the regular contributors are; Dr. George B. Loring, United States Commissioner of Agriculture; Dr. E. Lewas STURTEVANT, Secretar of the Society for the Promotion of Agricultural Seisence; Mal. HENRY E. ALVORD; Dr. PAUL A. CHADBOURNE, ex-President of Williams College; President LEVI STOCKBERIOGE, of the Amberst Agricultural College; JAMES S. GRINNELL, and other special students. The other departments of the Weekly, news, editorial, literary, religious and miscellaneous are kept up to their recognized high standard, and all of the best characteristics of the paper carefully preserved. Trial subscriptions from July 1 to the close of the year; in clubs of 10 or more, $1.25. Commission to local agents. Sample copies free. Address
